presents

New York, New York

The distinctive tastes and seductive sounds of New York come to life at The St. Regis Bar.

The Big Apple (2 liters)

$488 per gls

The Big Apple was popularized as a name for New York City by John J. Fitzgerald in a number of horse-racing articles for the New York Morning Telegraph in the 1920s. The earliest of these was a casual reference on 3rd May, 1921. The big apple used vodka, apple liqueur, lemon juice and apple juice.

Bee's Knees

$108 per gls

The Bee's Knees, a sweet and citrusy cocktail, lives up to its moniker, and will no doubt leave you buzzing too. This is one to sip when under the thrall of a dark and hazy speakeasy.

Bread Basket Sour

$108 per gls

One of America's favorite spirits, whiskey, combines with a bright fruity blend of blackberries and lemon juice in this contemporary cocktail created for the Smithsonian's Raise a Glass to History..

The St. Regis French 75

$108 per gls

The St Regis French 75's, history is as murky as the morning after drinking a few: some believe it to be one of the few cocktails actually created during Prohibition, while others think it got its first pour as early as the Victorian era.

Manhattan

$108 per gls

It's rumored that the Manhattan was first stirred up at the Manhattan Club in New York City in 1874. Legend has it, the drink was designed for a party thrown there by Jennie Jerome (Winston Churchill's mother).

Mint Julep

$108 per gls

This mix of bourbon, mint and sugar. Originated in the South sometime in the 1700's and gained massive popularity in 1938 when it first became the signature drink of the Kentucky Derby.

Old-Fashioned

$108 per gls

Known as the first true cocktail, the Old-Fashioned has gone through many incarnations since it first emerged in the early 1800s, from extra-fruity to kicked up with liqueur. But the basic mix of whiskey, Angostura bitters, sugar and a few dashes of water has outlasted all of the trends.

Old Traditioned

$108 per gls

Another version of Old-Fashioned cocktail, containing Spiced Rum, honey and orange bitters. It has become the new trend of old-traditioned classic drinks.

Southside

$108 per gls

One story is that the Southside got its name thanks to (in true 1920s fashion) some gangsters on the South Side of Chicago looking for a way to cover up their not-so-great hooch, and then somehow morphed into the drink of choice at waspy East Coast country clubs thanks to its summer-y nature.

Sazerac

$108 per gls

The stiff mix of rye whiskey or, as it was originally made, Cognac, bitters, sugar and absinthe is the official cocktail of New Orleans.

This Conflagration Nation

$108 per gls

Duncan Nicol, owner of San Francisco's legendary Bank Exchange bar, invented the pisco punch in the late 1800s. A mix of bourbon, carpano, mint syrup and apple juice, some of the drink's key ingredients went out of production long ago and became available again only recently.
